Prospectus

In the coming years, visitors will be able to experience the destruction wrought by the atom bomb at the Peace Park, a key site of the Hiroshima Peace Memorial Park. This site is the primary focus of the Peace Park, and visitors can learn about the history of the bomb and the events that led up to its release.

Exhibition Room A: Osaka Air Raid and the Daily Life of the People

Here objects connected to life in Osaka during the war are displayed to convey the city’s wartime experience. The exhibition shows objects from more than 50 air raids on Osaka. There are also displays of recreations of Osaka wartime scenes, which help visitors to understand the reality of war.
Exhibition Room B
15-Year War

Here, the exhibition presents facts about the war that spread through the Asia-Pacific region for 15 years from the time of the Manchuria Incident until the end of World War II. Another exhibit here shows the terror produced by the atomic bombs dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki. The destruction of war is also highlighted by an exhibit depicting the horrors of the Auschwitz concentration camps.

Exhibition Room C
Aspiration for Peace

Although seeking peace, World War II, the threat of nuclear weapons still hangs over the world, making the end world war 2. This event needs to be the end of the threats and war we once feared. Relativism, or dualistic differences, in addition to those issues, economic poverty and degradation of the natural environment are also posing grave threats to world peace. We should include continuous war and the suffering of people by considering the importance of the Earth, and the precariousness of life and human rights.
